Diversity Toolbox
Hispanic/Latino Bibliography

This bibliography identifies items of interest to those working with Alzheimer’s disease in Hispanic/Latino American communities. The list is not exhaustive and selection does not constitute endorsement. It includes items on research outside the United States because of possible application to Hispanic/Latino groups in America. Additional items are listed on the main Hispanic/Latino page in the Diversity Toolbox on the Alzheimer’s Association Web site http://www.alz.org/Resources/Diversity/HispanicLatino.asp Other items and links to outside sources can be found at the Association’s Hispanic Resource Portal http://www.alz.org/hispanic/overview_sp.asp

Additional information may be found in the general diversity bibliography.

The use of Hispanic or Latino has become an unsettled issue among the Hispanic/Latino population. So which term is correct to use? The Hispanic population numbered 50.5 million in 2010. In contrast, Latino refers to a group of people who lived in the conquered Roman provinces and regions where the Latin language took root, usually called the Romantic languages: French, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, Romanian, Catalan, and others.
